13. “Recipes for Romance” at Hudson House, Hudson, New York

If you happen to be going on any romantic weekend excursions upstate in the coming weeks, make your way to picturesque Hudson to check out this group show curated by Nick Payne. Billed as an erotic art show, the exhibition brings together an exciting mix of artists whose works range from the sensual to the amusingly bawdy. Particularly striking are artist Ever Baldwin’s paintings, abstract but oddly fetishistic abstract forms on charred wood as well as Anastasiya Tarasenko’s memorably bizarre painting And Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep, which pictures an anthropomorphized pig/woman tussled in bedsheets, her hooves shaped like high heels. Odd enough at first glance, a second look and we realize the entire scene takes place in a green monster-like creature’s cavernous mouth.

Location: Hudson House, 824 Warren Street, Hudson, New York
